

LPN TO AD NURSING (RN)

The Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) to Associate Degree (AD) Nursing is a two-semester Registered Nurse (RN) option for current LPNs who want to continue working while they pursue their RN degree. This option aims to reduce barriers and to provide more advanced standing credit for past education and working experience. This program prepares graduates to test for the NCLEX-RN to become RNs.

Admission into the program is a competitive process. Applicant prerequisites include C or better grades in Anatomy and Chemistry. Students must have a minimum 2.5 GPA with current licensure in good standing.

ASSOCIATE DEGREE NURSING (RN)

Registered Nurses (RNs) play a crucial role in providing and supervising patient care, assessment and evaluation of patient interventions, documentation, collaboration with other members of the healthcare team, patient education, and much more.

The Associate Degree in Nursing is a two-year undergraduate program that prepares individuals to test for the NCLEX-RN to become RNs.

High-tech, hands-on simulation centers prepare students to work in clinics, hospitals, nursing homes, schools, and specialty clinics.

Admission into the program is a competitive process.
